

MIDWEST CONNECTIONS

Black Sunday

by Tola Rotimi Abraham

"[A] piercing, supple debut . . . Abraham stuffs her novel past brimming, but its sophisticated structure and propulsive narration allow her to tuck in a biting critique of corrupt colonial religion and universally exploitative men . . . Twin sisters cut adrift in a perilous, duplicitous world learn that 'only the wise survive.' A formidable debut."

You'll be smiling even as your heart is breaking, and you'll tip willingly into this world Bump offers you because what appears again and again are spectacular beams of light, also called love, also called hope, also called family. “Impressive and surprising . . . in less than two hundred pages the author delivers a thought-provoking story about what it means both to live and die.”
